The calculations are based on the entire number of employes at the present time Department, the Post Office Department, classified service only and the department officials are given as to the Treasury, the War Department, the Department of Justice and the Navy Department, omitting the unclassified employes. Figures including all employes of the Department of Commerce and Labor are used only for 1910. The statistics were procured from the departments and the appropriation bills of the present year and 1895, and give an accurate idea of the present government salary conditions in

Total of Employes in 1910.

The total number of employes in the nine departments in the present year, based on the calculations as described, is 17,806, as against 7,550 in 1885, including as a department the then bureau of Agriculture. The following table gives the number of employes by departments in 1910.	189

d	Interior	5,426	2.4
	Agriculture	2.889	1
	Commerce and Labor	1.783
		17.800	7.50

The great increases, as indicated in the table, occurred in the Post Office, the Navy, the Interior and the Agricultural departments, with the addition of the latest Department of Commerce and Labor. The increase is apparent in all grades, owing to the volume of business which fell upon the departments from time to time and the organization and addition of new bureaus. A close scrutiny of the figures in the salary divisions of the departments of Interior and Agricuiture particularly gave an inkling of the increase of the salaries of $2,000 and

The proportion of employes in this class, including officials, at the three departments is .447, .407 and .305 for 1910, as against .098, .379 and .056 in 1885. The $12.000 5.000 increase has been due in a few instances to raised salaries of officials, but chiefly to the addition of large numbers of scientific, technical and professional men. In this class may be included patent examiners, the salaries of many of whom have but recently been raised from $1,800 to $2,100; attorneys in the Department of Justice and attaches of the pension bureau and land office. There has been an increase in salaries of chief clerks from $1.800, twenty-five years ago, to $2,000 and over at the present time. Salaries for this class of clerks are, with hardly an exception, in the following figures: $720, $780, $800, $840 and $900. The greater number of clerks receiving these salaries may be found in the Treasury Department, the Department of Commerce the salary limits of the classified service and Labor, Agriculture and War.
